Local bank holiday exclusions amended to local public holiday exclusions

Up until now you have been able to exclude an issue of a paid for publication from the ABC average circulation if its sales were significantly affected by the occurrence of a local bank holiday and you could demonstrate banks were closed or had reduced opening hours.

Due to changes in bank operations, demonstrating and auditing this condition is no longer relevant or practical. We have therefore amended this rule to allow issues of paid for publications to be excluded from the average circulation due to a local public holiday, which you can demonstrate either by its publication on an official local authority website or by virtue of a longstanding custom/tradition that we have previously recognised.

Setting the standard

Issues to be included/excluded [extract]

You can apply for an ABC granted exclusion if:

- ii) You can demonstrate there is a shortfall in the Normal Net Sale* greater than 5% because of the occurrence of a ~~Local Bank Holiday (only recognised regionally or locally)~~ and you have ~~evidence the banks were closed or had restricted opening hours~~ local public holiday, that is evidenced either:
 - By publication on an official local authority website; or
 - By virtue of a long-standing custom/tradition previously recognised by ABC
